

Reuse of Old Middle School Leaves Council in a Quandry

by James Giese

Prince George’s County School Board member Peggy Higgins is in a quandary. As the member whose district includes the City of Greenbelt, she wants to represent the city’s interests as they relate to reutilization of the soon-to-be-vacated original Greenbelt Middle School.

With the new school building, located on the same site, to be completed in time for a fall opening and the old school building then to be vacated, the Board of Education rapidly approaches a time when it must decide what to do with the old building. Higgins thus sought the advice of Greenbelt City Council at a worksession on March 5.

Also in attendance were members of the Greenbelt Middle School Task Force (GMSTF), which had presented an update to council of its interim report on reutilization of the old school building.

As to the city’s use of all or some of the old building for city purposes, both council and the task force are also in a quandary. They do not know how much the county school system plans to spend to fix up the old building. (They now know that the $6 million once allocated for historic restoration is not really there and that the school system will spend only as much as necessary to satisfy requirements of the Maryland Historic Trust.)

Ownership Unchanged

They also know it is unlikely the school system will release building ownership, as it once had done with Greenbelt Center School, now the city Community Center.

Apparently, if the city would utilize part or all of the old school building, it must be by means of a lease with the school system. And while the rental cost of such a lease might be nominal, its potential terms are unknown.

Would it be long or short term? What expenses would the city require to make the building useable and code compliant? How would the building be utilized and how would these uses be funded?

While the city council has not officially taken a position, Mayor Judith Davis pointed out several times during the meeting that a number of members of council have stated they will not commit the city to any obligation to utilize the old school without the utilization proposal first being approved at a city referendum. While a referendum election could be held in a month’s time, there is not adequate information to provide city voters in order to make a decision.

Apparently not in a quandary are the representatives of Turning Point Academy, a charter

March Sector Plan Workshop Focuses on the North Core

by Thomas X. White

The fifth community workshop on the developing Greenbelt Metro Area and Maryland Route 193 Corridor Sector Plan and Sectional Map Amendment (Sector Plan) was held on March 15 at Springhill Lake Elementary School in Greenbelt West. The workshop was fairly well attended with residents and elected representatives from Greenbelt, Berwyn Heights and North College Park.

Councilmember Ingrid Turner, Prince George’s County Council District 4, was also in attendance, along with a number of staff members from the Prince George’s Planning Department led by Sector Plan Project Director Chad Williams, as well as representatives of the City of Greenbelt and Metroland Developers, LLC. The workshop focused on the expected alternative development scenarios proposed for the site immediately adjacent to the Greenbelt Metro Station.

As the Sector Plan process has evolved since its inception in early 2011, the lack of progress on previously ambitious development plans for the North Core Metro site, the sagging economy and legal battles between the developers and Washington Metropolitan Area Transportation Authority (WMATA), which owns the site, has severely dampened the likelihood that the planned Mixed-Use Development (MUD) at the North Core would take place any time soon.

In fact, the current agreement between WMATA and Metroland Developers, LLC for development at the site expires in 2014; if not extended, it is likely that WMATA would reconsider options for the proposed development.

FBI Site

In the meantime, the Greenbelt Metro site has been touted as one of several I-495 Beltway Metro sites the federal General Services Administration (GSA) might consider for a proposed consolidation project for the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) headquarters (GNR, February 9, 2012). That potential possibility for the North Core site has somewhat complicated the Sector Plan planners’ task because it presents two dissimilar visions for the North Core.

In the words of Williams, “what happens at the Metro Station North Core essentially drives the types of development in the other sector plan areas.” Thus, the March 15 workshop elucidated two visions: one, a MUD scenario with a transit district development overlay; the other, a potential site for a GSA tenant.

Setting the stage for discussion of the alternatives, Williams noted that the Conceptual Site Plan approved for the North Core runs with the land and does not expire. It could be amended, however, through an initiative taken by the owners but cannot be amended by

All that One Needs to Know To Vote in Coming Primary

by Kathleen Gallagher and Mary Moien

Many Marylanders were expecting to vote in the presidential primaries on Super Tuesday in February as in 2010. The primary, however, had been moved to April 3, a still critical time, especially for Republicans.

In addition to going to their polling places on April 3, registered Maryland voters will again have two additional options for casting their ballots in this year’s presidential primary: In-person early voting will be available for six days before the election at specified locations and all voters may now also choose to vote absentee, not only those who cannot come to the polling place on election day.

It is now too late for anyone to register to vote in the general election who has not already done so. People may check their registration status, as well as locate their polling place and preview the ballot by going to <http://www.elections.state.md.us> and clicking on “Find Out Here!”

Note that other contact information for the Prince George’s County Board of Elections is given at the end of this article.

Early Voting

Voters may vote at any early voting center in the county in which they are registered. Prince George’s County has five designated centers, the closest one to Greenbelt being the College Park site. Early voting centers will be open 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. from Saturday, March 24 through Thursday, March 29, with the exception of Sunday, March 25 when polls will be open from noon to 6 p.m.

Early Voting Process

Voting during the early voting period is the same as voting on election day. Voters will check in as usual and use the touch screen voting system. The ballot is identical to the one on the voting machines on election day. Instructions will be available at the early voting centers. Election judges will also be available to answer questions or to provide help.

Though not required for voting, it is a good idea to bring identification showing the current address in case of a problem with a voter’s registration. For additional information call the Prince George’s County Board of Elections at 301-430-8020.

Absentee Voting

Any registered voter now has the option to vote by absentee

Speed Cameras Coming, Public Hearing March 26

by Kathleen Gallagher

Greenbelters who have racked up one or more tickets from a College Park speed camera (and, no, that’s not a confession from this reporter) may be pleased to learn they will soon have the opportunity to entice unwitting College Parkians into the path of speed cameras right here at home. At its regular meeting on March 12, the Greenbelt City Council introduced two pieces of legislation necessary to continue down the road to adoption of speed cameras in school zones.

Discussion of the topic was largely deferred to the March 26 meeting, when a public hearing will be held and such legislation returned to the agenda for adoption.

The State of Maryland’s law enables municipalities to introduce photo speed-monitoring systems within designated school zones, which are defined as being within a half-mile radius of a school. State law requires that the city not enact its own law without giving reasonable notice and holding a public hearing.

Law Provisions

The city’s new law must comply with a number of requirements of state law. Speed cameras are allowed to operate only from 6.a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday. Prior to activation of such a system, the city must publish notice of camera locations on its website and in a newspaper of general circulation in the city.

The city must also ensure that school zones are designated and that each sign designating a school zone must also announce that speed-monitoring systems are in use in local school zones. For a period of at least 30 days after activation of the first speed camera, enforcement of any violations would be limited to issuing a warning.

Penalties

The civil penalty for a speed violation will be $40, the maximum permitted by state law. Additional fines would be imposed if payment is not timely. Violations will not be considered moving violations for the purpose of assessing points and will not be recorded on the driving record of the owner or driver of the vehicle.

State law specifies that speeds of 12 or more miles per hour

Letters to the Editor

Too Much Information

I am a Greenbelter and normally read this as it provides good community information and updates. However, in the March 8, 2012 (Vol. 75, No. 16) issue, I think it would be helpful if prudence were better used. Specifically, on Pg. 8 in “Two Attempted Burglaries Occur at Roosevelt Center,” it would have been better to omit that “Glare from the service station windows prevented the capture of usable information.”

Also, in the next paragraph, it begins “Novick said the glass in the windows and doors are 4-ply.”

I just think it might have been better not to disclose so much so as not to 1. regarding glare – should not let the criminals know that they are not even suspected or going to be pursued and 2. regarding the 4-ply glass – the same or potential criminals who might want to attempt the same (or a similar) burglary could ascertain what it would take to break through a 4-ply (or greater) window for future reference.

It is not necessarily wise to disclose all info.

Critical Voter Info Omitted?

In a copy of his letter to the Prince George’s County Elections Administration, Mandan Road resident Bruce Knight writes:

Dear Ms. Alexander,

My household recently received an official specimen ballot in the mail entitled PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY ELECTION. Unfortunately it appears to be in error; there are no Republican Party ballots in the specimen. Since the cover does not specify this to be a Democratic Party only specimen ballot this could be misinterpreted in several ways, not the least of which is to suggest to Republican voters that they do not need to go to the polls.

If this was intended to be a Democratic Party only specimen ballot, then the cover page should be corrected. If the Republican Party specimen ballots were inadvertently omitted then they should be added.

Either way the specimen ballot should be re-issued. If I am misreading the specimen ballot, please accept my apology in advance.

Bruce R. Knight

Editor’s Note: As Mr. Knight has likely been notified by the county elections office, primary election sample ballots for the Republican ticket are sent only to registered Republicans, while sample Democratic ballots are sent only to registered Democrats, who are the only persons who can vote in Maryland’s primary for selection of party candidates for the coming fall election.

On Screen

Friends Galore and More

“Friends with Kids,” a new take on having a baby, opens at Old Greenbelt Theatre on Friday, March 23. Not to be confused with “Friends with Benefits” or “Friends with Money,” this slickly-packaged comedy features two best friends (played by Jennifer Westfeldt and Adam Scott) who decide to stay single while doing the necessary to start a family. Nor will they get bogged down in such wise like their married pals in the Big Apple, no sirree.

Can they bring it off? Can the cross-hatched dialogue get it on without sexual content and profanity?

R. Running time: 108 minutes.

Global Warming Role Of Sun Is ASG Topic

The March 29 meeting of the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt (ASG) will feature a presentation at 7:30 p.m. by Dr. Keith Strong on “The Sun’s Role in Global Warming,” at the Howard B. Owens Science Center, 9601 Greenbelt Road. Has the sun changed sufficiently to explain global warming? Golden Age Club

by Bunny Fitzgerald

The Golden Age Club meeting on March 14 had a rather small group attending. Some of us were on the trip with Karen Haseley to the Hagerstown Museum and outlets. It was a really interesting trip and we walked and shopped a lot.

We will play bingo on March 28 and have the Chinese Auction on April 11. This is a fundraiser for the club and lots of fun. Come enjoy and bring an article to be auctioned off.

Another reminder – the anniversary luncheon is on April 19 at the Holiday Inn on Route 1 near IKEA. We have a deadline the first week in April, so members need to come to the meeting and sign up in advance. The New Dimensions singers will be at the luncheon this year with a new program.

Let’s all try to be quick to listen, slow to speak and slow to become angry. Be very quick to enjoy this beautiful spring weather in Greenbelt.

St. Hugh Bids Farewell to Father Hurd

by Kathleen McFarland

On Saturday, February 18 several hundred St. Hugh’s parishioners lined up to say good-bye to the Rev. R. Scott Hurd at a reception following the 5 p.m. Mass. Father Hurd, who has served for over 11 years as pastoral associate at the parish, has been reassigned by Cardinal Donald Wuerl, Archbishop of Washington, to head up a new national office which will work with Episcopal parishes in the United States and Canada that are seeking entrance into the Catholic Church.

The responsibilities of the new assignment make it necessary for Father Hurd to step down from his other position in the Archdiocese, director of the Office of the Permanent Diaconate, as well as his St. Hugh duties. In the new position, he will work out of an office in the Pastoral Center in Hyattsville. He and his family will continue to live in Alexandria, Va., and he remains a priest of the Archdiocese of Washington.

Father Hurd, formerly a married Episcopal priest, was received into the Catholic Church and given special permission to study for the Catholic priesthood. After three years of instruction, he was ordained a Catholic priest of the Archdiocese of Washington by Archbishop James Hickey in 2000. The post at St. Hugh’s was his first assignment.

Commuting from his home in Virginia, he has become part of the parish family, assisting the pastor in saying masses each weekend, hearing confessions, presiding at funerals and weddings, attending community events and fundraisers. He has been especially known for his cogent, appealing homilies and his popular Bible study workshops and seminars.

Father Hurd’s recent book on forgiveness has received excellent reviews. He knows all the people of the parish and their love and respect for him was evident by the large crowd that turned out for his farewell Mass and reception.

St. Hugh’s pastor, Father Walter Tappe, delivered a touching speech to start off the reception in Grenoble Hall, thanking his longtime colleague and friend for his service and assuring him that he would be welcomed back at any time.

The people of the parish then lined up to give Father Hurd their own personal good wishes. It was apparent he will be greatly missed.

Father Hurd’s departure leaves a large void, hard to fill. Father Tappe said it seems unlikely that an assistant priest will be assigned to St. Hugh’s but that the Dominican fathers from the Dominican House of Studies in Washington will continue to provide assistance at the four weekend masses.

the Sector Plan.

In addition, Williams characterized current development agreements between the developers and the City of Greenbelt as valid only between the current owners and the city; that is, those agreements would expire with different owners. Nor could those agreements be enforceable by county regulations.

No matter what development takes place at the North Core, Williams noted other overarching concerns: too much development or inappropriate development at the site, the design or character of development, the importance of connectivity with the larger community and the provision of open public space and amenities.

With any development scenario at the North Core, there would be significant infrastructure requirements, especially for the additional on-off ramps to the Beltway from and to the East.

Planning Concerns

Williams also listed the basic planning assumptions, no matter what development takes place at the North Core. For example, a full Beltway interchange would be necessary to serve the site; the Indian Creek watershed would have to be designated as a preservation and conservation area and there would be a South Core build-out, generally based on its current approvals. In addition, a pedestrian bridge from the site to North College Park neighborhoods, enhanced connectivity within the site and incorporation of public spaces and overall reduction of impervious pavement surfaces would be required.

Next, Williams listed some pros and cons for the mixed-use-development scenario. Among the pros for the MUD at the North Core was its providing maximum use of the Metro system and reducing car use. It would also be the best approach in creating a sense of place for the Metro site. The mixed use approach, assuming a continued viable partnership between WMATA and Metroland Developers, LLC, would result in a substantial increase to Greenbelt's tax base.

The listed cons for the MUD scenario included current marketing constraints and competition with local shopping, restaurant and hotel businesses and other town center types of development at Metro stations and a significant increase in the number of parking spaces for the new development. The over 3,000 existing surface parking spaces would require replacement with structured parking.

Other issues would be the longer, drawn out time for the total build-out on the site and the possible negative outcome that the types of development would not drive Metro ridership.

GSA Tenant

The scenario for a GSA tenant to be placed at the site (not necessarily the FBI) would likely assume approximately 2.0+ million square feet of office space among several buildings, a range of 11-12,000 employees at the site, some possibility for mixed-use development, nearly 8,000 structured parking spaces and the site development taking place nearly concurrent with such infrastructure improvements.

The pros for such a scenario would include so-called-spin-off tax benefits for increased housing and retail demand, ancillary office demand in or near Greenbelt and limited disruption. GSA-occupied buildings would also likely be LEED certified with energy and environmental benefits.

On the con side, security requirements might limit public access in areas and the sheer size of the development might preclude other uses. In addition, depending on the specific GSA arrangements, tax benefits might have only a limited, finite time (say up to 20 years).

Williams' initial presentation also included graphic examples of various positioning scenarios for proposed building locations on the site to demonstrate the possible resulting shading and obstruction scenarios that could affect North College Park neighborhoods if the envisioned development took place. The demonstration generally positioned buildings of three to four stories or five to six stories close to the Metro line, buildings of six to seven or eight to 12 stories in the middle of the site and another array of three to four or five to six-story buildings in a third row closer to the open-space conservation area.

Following Williams' introductory presentation, attendees broke up into four groups to discuss what they had learned. Williams asked participants to respond to the general question: How do you feel about the development elements – sustainability, transportation, connectivity, housing, neighborhood preservation and quality of life issues?

Breakout Summaries

Table #1 reported the following issues or concerns: The height of the buildings; connectivity with surrounding neighborhoods; whatever goes in should be compatible with existing neighborhoods; environmental concerns; attracting "good" retail and ultimate design of the additional Beltway access ramps and adjustments of existing ramps from and to the west.

Table #2 expressed the concern with the GSA scenario that a large single employer, operating mainly from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., would require Metro to address a huge opposite flow back to center city in the evening period, thus stressing the station. They also noted the need for substantial additional parking and wondered about traffic increases on Route 193 and the Beltway.

They felt there should be no tall buildings adjacent to the Metro station. They also expressed concern about air pollution from the Beltway, yet argued that sufficient parking for Metro should be ensured. They also suggested the site could be left as is.

Table #3 reported there was too much density, even with the CSP MUD scenario. This table questioned the modeling of building heights and the shadows cast, indicating that they thought the modeling was deceptive regarding such impacts. The feeling was that the North College Park neighborhoods' view-shed would be drastically diminished by the staggering of heights as shown. They contended that the view shown in the graphics were as if neighbors were located about 50 feet above their back yards.

They also urged a better mix of housing for the North Core to accommodate lower salaried workers. They felt that the current market was not strong enough for anything. They urged attention to connectivity and suggested smaller blocks within the North Core grid. A specific concern for the GSA scenario was that it might attract terrorism attacks.

Table #4 noted concerns with the height of the buildings, connectivity, security and the need for a pedestrian bridge to North College Park. Overall they urged a mix of retail, cafés and restaurants creating a desirable place to live and to visit. They wanted the MUD to be the preferred development scenario, with good transportation access, user-friendly conditions for pedestrians, public spaces with amenities, open space and environmental features.

A Future Workshop

At the close of the workshop, Williams thanked everyone for their participation, reminding them that another community workshop would be held on March 22, again at Springhill Lake Elementary School. That workshop is intended to discuss refined versions of the two development concepts based either upon a GSA scenario or a MUD scenario.

The final community workshop on the Sector Plan is scheduled for April 19 at Springhill Lake Elementary School. At that workshop there will be a wrap-up for what would be the preferred Sector Plan concept.

The current schedule has the county planning staff publishing a proposed Sector Plan in the June/July time frame and a Joint Public Hearing of the Prince George's County Planning Board and the county council on the proposed plan in September or October. Final approval of the Sector Plan would likely occur sometime in the first quarter of 2013.

Police Assessment Open Meeting Set

On Monday, April 2 at 6 p.m. a public information session will be held by a team of assessors from the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies (CALEA), in Council Chambers at the Municipal Building, 25 Crescent Road.

The assessors arrive March 31 to examine all aspects of Greenbelt police policy and procedures – management, operations and support services. In addition to on-site assessment, employees and members of the community are invited to offer comments.

The CALEA team verifies that Greenbelt's police meet all Commission standards as part of its accreditation process, a voluntary process awarding certification, a highly-prized recognition of law enforcement professional excellence. The accreditation team is composed of law enforcement personnel from similar, non-Maryland agencies and is led by Chief Thomas Bennett of the Suffolk, Virginia police department.

Anyone wishing to speak but unavailable at the public session can provide comments by calling 240-542-2104 between 1 and 3 p.m. on April 2.

above the limit are subject to ticketing. When Councilmember Edward Putens asked whether Greenbelt could ticket at a lesser speed, City Manager Michael McLaughlin said he thought that could not be done but that staff would get an answer before the next meeting.

Vendor Contract

The city council also introduced for first reading a resolution to purchase and implement the new automated speed enforcement system with Brekford Corporation of Hanover, Md., which provides such service to the City of Laurel and to at least seven other jurisdictions in the state. Staff of Greenbelt's Police Department had recommended selection of Brekford after interviewing all vendors who provide such services in the state and then visiting and getting a close overview of the system in Laurel.

Council met with Brekford representatives in a worksession on February 15 and Brekford's capabilities were judged superior on a number of fronts, including the fact that its location and work in Maryland have given the company experience with the interaction needed with the State Highway Administration.

According to Assistant City Manager David Moran, the city has thus far only informally discussed specific plans for locations and numbers of cameras since doing the evaluations enabling the city to make such decisions that will be part of Brekford's job. Nor is estimation of likely revenues from the cameras possible until then.

The project is running somewhat behind schedule. The current year's city budget includes $200,000 in projected revenue from cameras for this fiscal year, which ends June 30. Especially given the 30-day violation warning period, it now appears unlikely that tickets will be issued prior to the start of the 2013 fiscal year.

Council Votes to Oppose Widening of B-W Parkway

by Kathleen Gallagher

The city council at its February 27 regular meeting agreed to postpone action on a motion to oppose the widening of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway to its next regular meeting on March 12. The State Highway Administration (SHA) held the last of three public meetings of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway Widening Feasibility Study on February 16. Among other findings were that the road would carry more vehicles but not lessen congestion, that there could be significant environmental, safety and community impacts and that the cost would run anywhere from $343 million to $565 million depending on the options chosen.

In light of those findings, Councilmember Leta Mach said on February 27 that she believed the time had come for the city council to take a stand in opposition to the project. Her motion to that effect, seconded by Councilmember Rodney Roberts, was postponed following a request from Mayor Judith Davis that council not take a position without first providing an opportunity for public comment. She noted that prior to the feasibility study, Greenbelt residents had come down on both sides of the question, since for many people the congestion on the parkway at increasingly extended hours was indeed a serious inconvenience.

The topic had been contentious among the public at the time that Roberts first placed it on a council agenda in December 2010. When the mayor asked if anyone wished to speak, resident Chris Shuman broke the silence by saying that he had come to speak on a different agenda item but was willing to comment on this one, too. He said, "The costs seem astronomical, the benefits marginal" and that much more could be accomplished by directing the money elsewhere.

Ben Fishler then spoke to say it appeared that the feasibility study itself had concluded there was not much point in undertaking the project. He encouraged council to support Mach's motion. Since no one else wished to speak, Davis concluded by reading an email message from resident Liam Forrestal expressing opposition to the project, which he said would increase noise and pollution in an already environmentally sensitive area. Forrestal said, "Let I-95 be the corridor between D.C. and Baltimore." Later on the agenda, the council voted unanimously to send a letter in opposition to the widening, citing the many concerns that had been raised.

The SHA presentation on the study is available at greenbeltmd.gov. Click on "Government," then "Watch Council Meetings Live," then "Agenda" for the March 12 meeting. Then follow the links for "Baltimore Washington Parkway Feasibility Study" (agenda item #7).

Spring Is Indeed Springing and the Robins Are Back

by Don Comis

If we have any doubts spring is coming, wildlife has no such doubts. I saw a robin on the Prince George’s Audubon Society bird walk around Lake Artemesia on a very warm Thursday on March 1. We couldn’t find a turtle there but the next day I saw five more robins along the Greenbelt Lake trail and peninsula and one turtle sunning on a branch in the lake, the first I’ve seen in months. One robin on the lake peninsula got a worm from the soil left wet from the heavy rains. On the morning of March 6, I counted six robins and again a robin on the peninsula scored a worm, this time a fatter one. I also saw another turtle sunning on a fallen tree with a mallard, just like my earlier sighting.

Fortunately, on Thursday, the walk was led by Don Messersmith, who has taught bird identification and an introduction to ornithology at the Graduate School USA (formerly Graduate School USDA) since long before I came to this area in 1976 to work at the school’s bookstore. When we saw that robin, I asked Messersmith to solve the mystery of whether “our” robins migrate south for the winter or merely flock together and huddle in the woods out of sight – or whether they are different species.

Robins v. Robins

It turns out that our robins do migrate south and the large flocks of robins we stumble into over winter are “winter robins,” a different sub-species, that come from further north to spend the winter in our south, replacing our lawn robins. Messersmith thinks they may have already left our area as the “spring robins,” our robins, start arriving. You can spot our returning robins because they tend to be alone when they first arrive and they aren’t shy even in busy places like Lake Artemesia or the Greenbelt Lake trail on a nice day.

The northern robins are usually in flocks and they are very shy and wary. I know they haven’t left Greenbelt as of Friday, March 2 because I saw a flock of about 50 of them plumbing the soggy Braden Field for worms. Unlike the five spring robins which were seen mostly one at a time and let me get close, the Braden Field bunch wanted that field all to themselves – after all they have a big trip ahead of them. The flock was down to 15 on Tuesday, March 6 so they may be starting their return trip.

Messersmith explained that the northern robins will go north to New England and Canada to breed on their home territory while our robins will soon begin to pair up and breed right here in our Greenbelt home.

Besides the early blooming of crocuses and daffodils, trees and shrubs are budding, with small leaves emerging on some of the new shrubs planted as part of the Hillside-Greenhill Stream Renovation project. The willow plantings are also sprouting, first flowering with silvery catkins and now developing leaves on green shoots that are several inches long. And, squirrels are using their aerobatic skills to feast on tree buds, when they’re not chasing each other, as some of the first wildlife to catch spring fever. Birds are also feasting on new leaves emerging.

March Madness

On March 4 I also saw three tufted titmouse birds in close contact near my house on Laurel Hill Road, making me guess there were two males and one female, more signs of spring madness. And on March 6 three chickadees were at it, and I mean AT IT! My recent walks around the Lake make me think the winter visiting ring-necked ducks and hooded mergansers are beginning their departure, since I could only see a lone female hooded merganser and five ring-necked ducks. This fits with the March 1 Bird Migration Forecast (BirdCast) that, “The exceptionally warm winter across much of the Eastern US means that migrants may be on the move earlier than usual this year and we are already seeing this in many places.” This new feature, at www.ebird.org, is a collaboration between the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Cornell University Lab of Ornithology.

The good news is that two wood duck couples appeared on the Lake on March 6.

An experienced Greenbelt Lake fisherman told me that crappie and other fish begin spawning between now and June, starting when the lake warms to about 50 degrees.

The Lake Artemesia walks occur on the first and third Thursdays each month and are advertised in the News Review. The walks from April through July start at 6 p.m.

First impressions are made at a glance and nothing makes a better impression than a beautiful smile. A smile makeover improves the appearance of your smile, and even more important, can restore the health and function of your mouth and teeth. If you are self-conscious about the appearance of your teeth, there may be a quick and convenient solution to restore your confidence when you smile and laugh.

A smile makeover always begins with a comprehensive dental check-up and consultation. During the initial consultation, your dentist will identify and discuss with you various issues that may be affecting your dental health. These problems may include tooth decay (cavities), gum disease, chips, cracks, gaps, misalignment, and staining or yellowing of your teeth.

Your dentist will then develop a treatment plan specific for your unique dental health and dental care needs.

A smile makeover can include the use of teeth whitening, dental crowns, porcelain veneers and dental implants. The procedures used to treat your mouth will depend on the types of dental problems that you have.

1. Crooked teeth are harder to clean and can lead to gum disease. Crooked or crowded teeth can often be straightened with nearly-invisible Invisalign orthodontics, which are more discreet, less expensive, and often work faster than traditional braces. Invisalign is a great option for adults who have always wanted straight teeth, or have had relapse from braces as a teenager.

2. Chipped and broken teeth can be repaired with combinations of cosmetic bonding, porcelain veneers or porcelain crowns. Porcelain veneers are custom-made wafer-thin shells which, when bonded to the front of teeth can dramatically improve a smile. Porcelain crowns encase the entire tooth in a protective covering at the gum line. In the past, porcelain crowns were fused to metal and were less natural looking. Today, all-porcelain crowns and veneers are more durable and much more natural looking.

3. Missing teeth can be replaced with dental implants and crowns, permanent bridges or dentures. A dental implant is an artificial tooth root that anchors a replacement tooth, bridge or denture. With the recent advances in dental implants, more patients are candidates for permanent tooth replacement. A dental implant restored with a crown looks, feels and functions like a natural tooth.

4. Stained and discolored teeth that cannot be brightened with professional teeth whitening can sparkle again with traditional porcelain veneers or the newest no-preparation veneers. “No-prep” veneers can be a perfect solution to repair stained, discolored or chipped teeth and can also fill in spaces between teeth. With little or no drilling and no needles or Novacaine, these custom made thin veneers create an affordable, beautiful and natural smile.

5. Gaps between teeth can be closed instantly with porcelain veneers or more gradually with Invisalign or traditional orthodontics.

Ask your dentist about ways to keep your smile looking and feeling great. Everyone deserves a healthy and beautiful smile.

elementary school located in a church on Good Luck Road. Although there has been little communication between the school and the city, the school’s representatives have made known their wish to lease the entire building for use by the school with the intent of expanding to become a kindergarten to 12th grade school.

As a charter school, Turning Point is a part of the county school system, funded on a per-pupil cost basis. Apparently, the school leaders have less concern about the building’s condition or its operating costs. It is already in use as a school.

School directors appear prepared to take the building, with or without the 1969 wing which the school system may take down to enlarge the school bus parking lot.

When asked if a charter school would have first rights to the vacated building, Higgins said it was not clear. There is recognition on the part of both school board and staff of the city’s help in achieving the new school. However, if push came to shove, she said, it would be hard to get five votes (a majority) of the board to vote against a proposal for the building’s use as a charter school. For that reason, she felt it necessary to work something out to satisfy the city’s interests before such a proposal is put forth.

Option III

The task force has put forth four options for city use of the school ranging from leasing the entire building to provide for community services to leasing none of it. The greatest interest of council and the task force seemed to be Option III, in which the city would lease only specific desirable space, sharing other portions with another tenant.

The task force identified such desirable spaces as the original 1939 high school building (classrooms), the 1953 gym addition but not the rooms under or behind the gym and the 1969 administrative office wing.

From this list, city recreation staff proposed eliminating the second floor of the original school because it lacked an elevator for handicap access but to use some space behind the gym for secured storage. Some members of council felt the city should take possession of all the original 1939 building in order to ensure proper historic preservation.

Shared use with another user, such as Turning Point, was also discussed. It was felt the school system would not permit the city to sublease on a rental basis without the system getting rental monies. Those parts of the building most desired by many in the city, the gym and offices, would also be important features for school use.

Assistant Recreation Director Joe McNeal, staff liaison to the committee, said that for shared use to work, secured storage space for each use would be necessary. Otherwise, he said, needed equipment must either be hauled in or, not secured, it will disappear. However, the Recreation Department would consider shared use if this building were obtained by the school and would like shared use in the new middle school.

Survey Required

Members of council felt they could not reach a decision until a survey is completed by the Maryland Historic Trust to determine what measures would be required for historic preservation. Such a survey is not scheduled until

“If push came to shove, it would be hard to get five votes against ... a charter school.”

– Peggy Higgins,
school board member

August.

The task force recommended that it be carried out at an earlier date. Councilmembers agreed to write letters urging an immediate undertaking of such a survey.

The task force and council also felt more information was needed on how the school bus lot would be extended and what part of the school building would be torn down to accommodate such an extension. Other questions dealt with the feasibility of extending the lot because of topographic conditions. Concern was also expressed concerning significant tree loss. Higgins said the matter had been studied by school system engineers and found to be feasible. Councilmembers expressed a wish to see the engineer’s report. Higgins said she would try to acquire it for council.

Commentary

Molly Lester raised questions about a section of the task force’s update report that listed policy changes by the school system that greatly affected the decision process for city use of the building. She wanted more detail on when such changes had been made.

It was agreed that rather than actual changes of policy, the school system’s policies had been misrepresented to the city and the task force by school officials. Lester felt the city and task force should have verified such policy matters.

David Whaples and Shane Wisdom of the task force and David Shuman of the audience all expressed support for another school being located within the city, noting their beliefs that the more choices available to residents, the better. Whaples also said that full utilization of the building was the best alternative and the greenest. A school would accomplish that purpose, he felt.

Rosemary Pezzuto of Camp Fire USA, Inc., a member of the task force, told of that organization’s loss of space in the old Giant store in the commercial center at Franklin Park apartments for its programs. She is now operating out of a 635-square-foot townhouse, she said.

This downgrade limits and severely cramps the programs she can offer residents of that area, she said. She will have to hold summer camp programs in Hyattsville, busing participants there at significant expense.

She has undertaken a survey of resident programming needs, she said. However, she must tabulate the data herself in between other activities and a high turnover rate in the apartments makes such survey results questionable, she added.

Significantly, she found that households with foreign-born members are more interested in programs for families while non-foreign-born families prefer non-family programs.

Health Care Center

The owners of Franklin Park are trying to get a federally qualified primary health care center for the old Giant store building, Davis said. She thought that might be a good use for part of the old school building.

All members of council attended the worksession, as well as City Manager Michael McLaughlin. Also attending from the task force were Dave Lange, chair; Beatrice Rodgers, vice-chair; Keith Chernikoff, Brenda Cooley and Barbara Simon. Higgins and Councilmember Leta Mach serve as liaisons to the committee from the school board and council.
